A bibliography is a list of sources (books, journals, websites, magazines, etc.) one has used for researching a topic. Bibliographies are sometimes called "references" or "works cited" depending on the style format you are using. A bibliography usually just includes the bibliographic information (i.e., the author, title, publisher, etc.).

An annotation is a summary and/or evaluation.

Therefore, an annotated bibliography includes a summary and/or evaluation of each of the sources.

1. On a note card for each source, provide the complete bibliographical citation (MLA style). See the sample below.

Contributors' name(s). "Title of Resource." Title of the Website. Publisher name, Last edited date. Date of access. URL

2. Skip a line after the citation and briefly annotate your source with the following:
- A brief synopsis of the content of the site
- An evaluation of the usefulness of the information
- A summary of the information in the source that can be used in the research project.

Sample annotated bibliography entry:

Stephenson, Nate. "Florida Muck Fires." U.S. Environmental Update. 12 Aug 2005.
Environmental Concern Administration. 31 May 2006
http://www.nameofwebsite.org

Stephenson persuades the reader of the frequency and danger of muck fires, urging citizens to put pressure on state and local governments to prevent and fight the fires. The site represents the point of view of more extreme environmental groups.
